PROMPT #1

Restrictive voting laws have a disproportionate impact on the political power of communities of color, women, and the poor, denying them the power to elect candidates with shared values.

Research some strategies that a labor union has used in the past to effectively improve access to the vote, and what efforts should labor organizations implement in the future to increase access to the vote, especially for disenfranchised (defined as “denied the right to vote”) communities?

How is a labor union effective in bringing in better benefits & recognition for their members? How could a labor union also be effective in bringing policy change on a larger scale? Choose one labor union to focus on and interview one or more people who are members of that labor union about their views on how their union has helped them.
